Headline:
Sunshine and showers after a dry start.

Today:
After a mostly dry start with sunshine for some, showers will soon develop. These will persist through the day, turning heavy and possibly thundery at times, however with plenty of sunny intervals too. Maximum temperature 16 deg C (61 deg F).

Tonight:
Persistent heavy rain will edge its way into the south of the region through the evening. Meanwhile, showers will largely clear, and cloud will thicken elsewhere. Minimum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Thursday:
A dry start for most under cloudy skies, excluding some heavy rain lingering over the southwest edge of the region. Scattered heavy showers then arriving during the afternoon. Maximum temperature 18 deg C (64 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Sunshine and scattered showers after a dry start on Friday. A band of rain breaking up into showers on Saturday, followed by further sunshine and showers on Sunday. Light winds.
